MAX STONE WORKSHOP DESCRIPTION

Technical strength and body awareness are only partial facets of how we develop as dance artists. The workshop serves as a safe haven for dancers to explore improvisatory elements that help stimulate the imagination. Through solo and group work, certain tasks are given to encourage compositional impressions. These exercises help dancers to release and ultimately express ideas to which they may feel drawn. Additionally, choreographed phrases are introduced, taught and formatted throughout. The objective is to create familiar and focused pathways to an effortless expression of lyrical and percussive disciplines. By understanding and applying the particular dynamics of fall and rebound, momentum and flow, dancers discover a certain freedom, movement quality and kinetic range they never knew they possessed.

My desire for this workshop is to instigate and initiate the body's creative impulse, which I believe is innate within every person. The encouragement of individual traits that challenge both body and mind is of utmost importance and the unique qualities that each of us possess will be nurtured to full expression. Above all, however, let us together enjoy the process of discovery!

Max Stone innehar en Master of Fine Arts (MFA) i dans och har verkat som universitetslektor på fakulteten vid Southern Methodist University. Han var även med i den ursprungliga Broadway uppsättningen av Neil Simon/Marvin Hamlisch musikalen, They're Playing Our Song från 1979. Han har undervisat och koreograferat för en rad prestigefulla skolor och kompanier i USA. För närvarande tillhör han fakulteten vid Steps på Broadway, Peridance Capezio Center och Gibney dance 280 Broadway. Förutom undervisningen är Max konstnärlig ledare av Sexy Beast NYC, ett online- danskompani baserat i New York City.
